Hey Strum! I'm just checking out the new site. I didn't actually do it, but I think I have the ability to post in groups to which I don't belong. But I can't actually see any links to join or leave groups, so I'm not sure how the groups are set up here. Perhaps you could create a fake group so that we could play around and no one else would get notifications.

😊😊 Thanks so much for the info. I'll take some pictures and contact Donna Malus. This beautiful psaltery has to go to someone who will love it. It's got a butterfly and 4 half black walnut shells on the top butternut surface. What a lot of work!! Merilyn Hartwell

Thank you for the kind words about my new dulcimer bag.

I am truly blessed to have such wonderful mom.

The dulcimer bag means so much more than just a nice bag to put my beautiful dulcimer in....it was stitched with love.😊

It's great to be here. I almost stopped playing for many years, due to repetitive stress in my right hand - trying to play loud and impress people. Now I'm back playing and teaching, and realize hey, I can use this internet thingie...

Thank you Lisa for providing this community haven of like minded folks for those of us who are somewhat isolated by the vast distances of this beautiful continent. Thank you for all your hard work.

Lisa! What a wonderful surprise I've just had. It's 1630 hrs here, and I have just got in after a hairy drive home from South Wales in bad weather and heavy traffic. I was returning home from visiting the school at which my grand daughter teaches, her four/five year old group have been working a pirate theme this term, and she decided that my broad West Country accent would fit the bill for a 'real' pirate visit to end the term, a case of Johnny Depp meets Treasure Island blended with suitable tunes on a mountain dulcimer ! LOL I even managed to use sailors knots to 'tie up' the head mistress, much to the delight of the kids, and yes, one little girl played "Twinkle Twinkle" on a teardrop. So the buttons rounded of the day, I was wondering how I would get some (I think you made mention of special postage rates?) I will send something for the fund (bacon sarnies are fine by me) and I will show off the buttons on Sunday when some of us meet at Katie Phillips place.

hugs,

from your errant computer user !
