Table to explain how to set up designer form fields for user accounts and user profiles, assuming that a single user account controls the associated user profile (perhaps the most common scenario).
Draft Date 22-12-16

	User's Primary Account		User's Profile
Form designer title	user/signup	user/account	profile/create	profile/settings
Purpose	F1 For initial registration	F2 For later details that may be useful for Admin	F3 For details specific to the profile (and quota)	F4 For updating profile details
Visibility	V1 Field display options determine who sees the empty sign-up fields; if not displayed to all logged-out users, they will not be seen by new people trying to sign up.	V2 Field display options determine who sees the empty fields for later details. These should be made visible to (i.e. displayed to) logged-in users and Admins.	V3 Fields can be published in sidebar by adding code to the Skin style template	V4 Fields can be published in sidebar by adding code to the Skin style template
Comments, section 1	1.1 A short list of data fields to reduce the barrier to joining	1.2 This can be a longer list, allowing user to give details privately to Admin/	1.3 Recommend making this a full set of fields, so user can complete profile in one session	1.4 Recommend using same full set of fields as in profile/create
Comments, section 2	2.1 Recommend that all fields be "required"	2.2 Recommend that all extra fields be optional, so that new data in any field can be saved without concern for unexpected required fields	2.3 Some fields can be optional, and some required, when user first creates the profile	2.4 Recommend that any new fields be optional, so that new data in any field can be saved without concern for unexpected required fields
Comments, section 3		3.1 The user may be frustrated by the 'required' question alert when trying to save changes made in optional fields		3.2 The user may be frustrated by the 'required' question alert when trying to save changes made in optional fields
Comments section 4	4.1 Only account owner and Admin or Profile Admin can see added sign-up details, so fields can be marked 'for Admin only'	4.2 Only account owner and Admin or Profile Admin can see later added details, so fields can be marked as 'for Admin only'	4.4 Recommend marking fields in the form as 'Public' if they are published in the sidebar of a profile using a modified Skin style template	4.5 Recommend marking fields in the form as 'Public' if they are published in the sidebar of a profile using a modified Skin style template
